

Vaccine Assist Programme

Will I have any side-effects?

Most people will feel fine after their vaccination.

The vaccine may cause side-effects in some people. These reactions are nothing to worry about—they mean the vaccine is working and your body is learning to fight COVID-19.

If you do have side-effects, they should only last a day or two.

On the arm where you had your injection:
pain, redness, swelling

In the rest of your body:
tiredness, headache, muscle pain,
chills, fever, nausea

If you are feeling unwell, call us or see your doctor
